The 'Rockwell Bath' is a reproduction of a Twenties ceramic tub with a contemporary twist. Made from Vitrite® composite, which replicates the look and feel of the original without the weight, the bath and feet (shown in 'squash') are available in a range of colours; £6,056.40.

The 'Rockwell' range offers flexibility to be inventive with colour and inject some personality into the bathroom by mixing and matching a kaleidoscope of fittings to reflect your style. Shown above are the 'liquorice', 'willow', 'squash' and 'powder' colourways; 3-hole basin mixer set, from £768.

"We use colour and pattern to stamp our personality and taste pretty much everywhere in the house. However, the bathroom is often the most neglected room and the one where we play it safe. Not anymore! Perfect for adding a quick and stylish pop of colour, the new 'Rockwell' accents are designed to make boring bathrooms a thing of the past. The first thing to do is decide the mood you wish to create and then choose your palette to suit. For example, a bright and breezy beach house might lend itself to a blue and white colour scheme, while for a calming luxurious main bathroom in a smart town house, the look could be very different. Start to put together a mood board (similar to the page opposite) and be as subtle or bold as you dare. Don't be afraid to try the unexpected – sherbet yellow with raspberry and aged brass, say, or lilac with peppermint green. Try pairing a bold pattern on wallpaper or a tiled floor with a block of contrasting colour. Don't worry if you make a mistake: the beauty of the 'Rockwell' crosshead taps, shower mixers and bath feet is that the colours are all interchangeable."
